It is an area for which precautionary actions are taken in advance, including prompt evacuation prior to a release of radioactive materials, based on the Emergency Action Level (EAL), which provides the criteria of judging the severity of emergency situation, within an approximately 5km radius from the nuclear power station in order to evade definite radiation exposure influence.

(2) An area for which protective actions are taken in advance. (UPZ: Urgent Protective Action Planning Zone)

It is an area for which protective actions including sheltering are taken based on the Operational Intervention Level (OIL) providing the criteria for judging the implementation of protective actions and environmental monitoring, and the Emergency Action Level (EAL) providing the criteria for judging the severity of an emergency situation, within an approximately 30km radius from the nuclear power station in order to minimize a risk of radiation exposure affection.
